Marshall Day at the Capitol

Last week, around 200 Marshall University staff, faculty and students went to Charleston to participate in Marshall Day at the Capitol. Throughout the day, participants mingled around various Marshall exhibits, which also included members of our Brad D. Smith Student Incubator and Entrepreneurship department!

Teaching and Learning Conference 2025

Last Friday, the LCOB hosted 2025's Teaching and Learning Conference. The Teaching & Learning Committee is responsible for helping faculty members improve their teaching, helping students improve their learning, and developing opportunities for conversation and reflection among faculty, students, and staff around topics of teaching and learning.

This year's conference included: common talks on cross-disciplinary approaches to experiential education and real-world applications of experiential learning; a keynote address by David Wiley, PhD, Chief Academic Officer at Lumen Learning; individual presentations on teaching and learning; and student learning experiences with (from left to right) moderator Dr. George Lu, Andrew Kesling, LuSruthi Bhukya, Payton Taylor, Alexis Johnson.
